

ANNUAL REPORT 2019

Community Alliance for Global Justice

LETTER FROM THE DIRECTOR

BY HEATHER DAY

As I write in April 2020, we are at the beginning of the coronavirus pandemic. Even more than before, the world seems to be falling apart, especially in our country, which has the misfortune of lacking effective, compassionate, humane leadership at such a critical time. And yet, while we are all suffering from the chaos, shock and grief of this moment, we are also witnessing many beautiful acts of mutual aid, community resilience and solidarity. In crisis there is opportunity. The fault-lines of capitalism are laid bare, the demands we have been making for a more just world are rising in urgency, and some are finally being met: debt relief, increased assistance for the unemployed, housing assistance. But the future feels very uncertain, for CAGJ and for everyone.

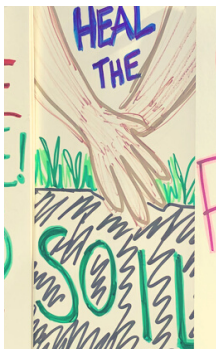

Even before the pandemic, CAGJ weathered many dramatic changes in the past year. First, we had to move, which was scary, given the challenges of the Seattle rental market. We are so happy to have found our beautiful new office in Welcome Table Church. It has been especially propitious to continue sharing our office with WA Fair Trade Coalition this past year, as we were both very busy organizing events for the 20th anniversary of the WTO protests!

This past month our brilliant Organizing Director Simone Adler took a new position with Working Washington/Fair Work Center. In the past three and a half years Simone co-led CAGJ and dedicated themselves to so many important initiatives that greatly strengthened our organization. It's impossible to overstate how much Simone will be missed!

Several legacies of Simone's vision for CAGJ live on:

- Simone coordinated AGRA Watch, including our research into the Cornell Alliance for Science for a report that we will publish soon.
- In June we will host RiseUp! Summer School for the second time, a political education and leadership development program that Simone launched in 2018.
- We would not be undertaking such an ambitious Strategic Assessment and Planning Process if it had not been for Simone's vision. Launched in June 2019, it will wrap up this coming June.

With the capable leadership of our 15 member Dream Team and our consultant Scott Winn, we are revamping CAGJ's Theory of Change, with the goal "to reinvigorate CAGJ by engaging our members in reflecting on our purpose in the food sovereignty movement and our role in the current political moment." Thanks to everyone who came to our two Member Gatherings, and look for a 3rd meeting in the coming months.

Our Food Justice Project leadership transitioned too in 2019: we are thankful for all that Alanna Boynton and Kelly Lake contributed, and so grateful to Robyn Greenfield and Noël Hutton for stepping up!

While CAGJ faces uncertainties given the current crisis, thanks to the leadership and participation of many CAGJ members, we continue to provide an activist home to all of you.

Thank you for your commitment to food sovereignty and social justice.

Heather Day,
CAGJ Executive Director

WTO+20: Marking 20 Year Anniversary of WTO Protests

As the origin of our organization, CAGJ marks the anniversary of the 1999 World Trade Organization protests to ensure Seattle activist history is remembered and honored to inspire new generations. In 2019 we co-organized multiple events, including MOHAI History Café's forum, and WA Fair Trade Coalition's Town Hall forum where we co-hosted a workshop with Institute for Trade and Agriculture Policy.

Another World is Possible! WTO+20: How a People's Uprising Shut-Down the World Trade Organization in '99 & Why it Matters for Today's Movements for Justice:

This was the name of our event that took place on November 30th, twenty years to the day we shut-down the WTO in 1999! CAGJ partnered with UFCW 21 to highlight the critical role of direct action in shutting-down the WTO's opening ceremonies, and to today's movements.

In the opening forum, Ken Workman with the Duwamish Tribe gave a welcome, David Solnit performed his "WTO to GND: WTF!" cantestoria (a play told with banners) and Correo Aereo shared a song. Then several organizers shared their reflections on the significance of the 1999 direct action, including Nancy Haque, Executive Director of Basic Rights Oregon, Edgar Franks, Familias Unidas por la Justicia Political Director, Deborah James, Coordinator of Our World Is Not for Sale Network, Vandana Shiva, renowned food sovereignty campaigner and author, who sent a video greeting, and Paul Cheoketen Wagner, founder of Protectors of the Salish Sea.

1999 Direct Action Network organizer David Solnit led screen printing and hand painting of patches for all the participants to take with them to commemorate 20 years.

Workshops addressed strategies to prevent expansion of Big Tech power in today's WTO, La Resistencia's campaign to shut-down the Northwest Detention Center (run by ICE), and how to push Seattle's Green New Deal further. Lisa Fithian gave her "Escalating Resistance, Mass Rebellion" training to inspire us to rise up to protect the things we love! Later we took direct action and danced in the streets while images from 1999 were projected onto the Convention Center, where the WTO talks collapsed at the end of the Battle in Seattle.

NAFTA 2.0 (USMCA) Is Not a Template for the Future of Trade

In December NAFTA 2.0 was approved by Congress in a bipartisan vote. Thanks to relentless work by a broad coalition of activists, the terms are an improvement over what Trump and his corporate backers originally negotiated. However, the agreement falls short on several fronts. It has no enforcement provisions for labor rights violations. It does not even mention climate change. It fails to stop agri-food corporations from dumping commodities and consolidating control over our food system.

The Trump administration is pushing for new agreements with the UK, EU and Kenya, among others. They want to further lower food and environmental standards, attack the precautionary principle (proof that a product does no harm), privatize the health industry, and promote corporate rights of Big Tech. A truly progressive pact would include binding climate standards, stronger rules to stop race-to-the-bottom outsourcing of jobs and pollution, and enforceable rules against currency cheating.

Looking Forward:

- As members of WA Fair Trade Coalition, we will continue to fight for a just food system by opposing the corporate, neoliberal agenda being pushed in new free trade agreements.
- Our US allies recently requested that we help connect them to African organizations opposed to the US-Kenya FTA, to assist in representing their concerns when comments are submitted to the US Trade Representative. We will continue to monitor the negotiations and uplift Kenyan organizations' concerns.
- While we do not have plans to organize a major commemoration of the 21st anniversary of the WTO protests this fall, we are exploring creative ways to share this history interactively in the future, including video installations and a traveling history exhibit.

SOLIDARITY CAMPAIGNS

Right to Good Food Solidarity: Got Green

- CAGJ organized with Got Green's Food Access Team through the Coalition to Close the Food Security Gap by giving public testimonies at City Council hearings and building public pressure to expand food access programs.
- CAGJ's annual Green-A-Thon team raised $1375 for Got Green and participated in their Earth Day door-knocking event in South Seattle.
- In May, CAGJ helped facilitate Got Green getting access to a community garden in north Beacon Hill, and supported garden work parties.
- In October, CAGJ organized an exchange between Got Green's Food Access Team and our Kenyan partners with GBIACK to share their knowledge about growing food for community.

Farmworker Solidarity: Community to Community and Familias Unidas por la Justicia

- CAGJ supported C2C's legislative organizing by mobilizing our members to make calls to Congress and the WA State Legislature and helping with press releases and media. CAGJ helped with turn-out for C2C's Annual Farmworker Tribunal in Olympia.
- In June, CAGJ brought several volunteers from Seattle to attend the first blueberry U-pick at Cooperativa Tierra y Libertad, to support the cooperatively-owned farm.
- In August, CAGJ joined the annual Farmworker March for Dignity in Whatcom county.

Local Food Producer Solidarity: Stop GE Salmon with Muckleshoot Food Sovereignty Project

- In 2019 the FDA lifted the import ban on AquaBounty's GE salmon eggs, which paved the way for the company to establish their first US-based production facility in Indiana. We've continued to collaborate with national partners Friends of the Earth, Center for Food Safety, and NW Atlantic Marine Alliance to organize a multi-pronged effort to prevent GE salmon from coming to market in the US.
- In April 2019 we co-hosted a film viewing at Town Hall Seattle, "Salmon People: Northwest Native Opposition to Genetically Engineered Fish", attended by over 100 people. We organized the event working with Valerie Segrest, Muckleshoot tribe member, author and activist that instigated this campaign, and panelists Fawn Sharp, President of the Quinault Indian Nation, Dana Perls with Friends of the Earth and Alan Stay, renowned tribal attorney (pictured above).

Food Justice Project

Community Education

Political Education Discussions

In 2019, our Food Justice Project organized political education discussions on the following topics: Gene Drives; WA State legislative process; Circular economy and Just Transition, with guest speaker Kamal Patel; Green New Deal in Seattle & nationally; History of La Via Campesina's role at World Trade Organization protests, and impact of international trade on our food system.

Clean Greens Teach-Out

In August, CAGJ members visited Clean Greens Farm in Duvall for a Teach-Out. While weeding turnips and picking green beans, we learned from farmers Tommy and Venice about this community-run farm with deep roots in the black community in Seattle's Central District. Several CAGJ members attended their annual dinner. We were all greatly saddened to learn of the passing of Clean Greens' Director, Lottie Cross, who played a vital role in Seattle's food justice community. May she rest in power and peace.

Looking ahead: Summer School 2020

We look forward to organizing more Teach-Outs in 2020, and are excited to organize the second year of Rise Up! Summer School. In light of coronavirus, we are exploring online platforms. We hope to visit Cooperativa Tierra y Libertad, the cooperative blueberry farm formed by Familias Unidas por La Justicia, to deepen our connection with the farm and bring new people into the movement to support justice for farmworkers!

Food Chain Worker Solidarity: UFCW 21

- Until New Seasons Market suddenly closed its doors in December, we supported United Food and Commercial Workers Local 21 in their fight to challenge the store's expansion to Seattle. We participated in efforts to engage New Seasons management in anti-gentrification efforts in the Central District, and advocated for better working conditions for their workers, who did not have union representation.
- As PCC plans to move into the location vacated by New Seasons, they've sought community input for their food access programs and reached out to CAGJ for input. CAGJ will continue strategizing with UFCW 21 to hold the store accountable as displacement continues to impact Seattle's historically African-American district.
- In July we supported member-led informational pickets at several area grocery stores including QFC, Safeway and Fred Meyer to support their demands for improved staffing, scheduling, training and safety.

LOOKING FORWARD

- We are supporting all of our partners as they mobilize in response to the devastating impacts of the coronavirus on food system workers.
- We will continue to organize with Got Green to hold City Council and the Mayor accountable for transparently distributing the Sugary Beverage Tax revenue to community-driven food access programs.
- In January 2020 CAGJ met with FUJ staff to establish our intent to collaborate with them as a new Solidarity Campaign partner. We look forward to mutually supporting each other's campaigns.
- As Cooperativa Tierra y Libertad heads into another blueberry growing season, we will strengthen our support through volunteering at the cooperative and building local awareness in Seattle for potential berry sales.
- We will continue to follow C2C's lead for mobilizing action on legislation impacting farmworkers and our food system.
- We will continue to resist the production and distribution of GE salmon in the US and push for strong labeling, utilizing creative tactics to raise the public's awareness and show solidarity with Northwest Tribes.

Educating Community: The Battle for the Future of Food in Africa

As an allied member of the Alliance for Food Sovereignty in Africa (AFSA), AGRA Watch demonstrated our commitment to AFSA's "Agroecology for Climate Action" campaign by organizing a community event on Oct 30 with the Coordinator of AFSA, Million Belay, an Ethiopian expert on indigenous food and seed sovereignty; and activist, researcher, and author Timothy A. Wise. Over 100 people attended the event at Town Hall Seattle, as Million and Tim engaged in a discussion on climate change, farmers, and the future of food in Africa. They addressed the role of the Gates Foundation and Alliance for a Green Revolution in Africa (AGRA) in locking governments into an agricultural system of increased use of chemicals, genetically engineered and hybrid seeds, and decreased production of highly nutritious and resilient varieties due to land grabs for crop commodities. Check out our website for a full report and video of the event!

Prior to the Town Hall event, we coordinated a book tour at universities in the region for Tim Wise to promote his new book, Eating Tomorrow: Agribusiness, Family Farmers, and the Battle for the Future of Food (New Press 2019).

Tim & Million speaking at Town Hall Oct 30. We hung up our Agroecology for Climate Action banner showing our solidarity with the African food sovereignty movement.

Taking Action at the Gates Foundation

Agroecology for the Climate, Not Corporate Biotech!
Rally in Solidarity with the African Food Sovereignty Movement

Before the evening event on Oct 30, Million and Tim joined CAGJ activists outside the headquarters of the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation to call attention to the world's largest private foundation and biggest funder of biotechnology programs in Africa. The Gates Foundation launched AGRA, the Alliance for a Green Revolution in Africa, in 2006, and has poured millions of dollars into the initiative to steer the course of African agriculture toward biotechnology and reliance on hybrid seeds and chemical fertilizers. By strongly influencing policies and encouraging monopolized control over markets, AGRA in essence orients African farmers to becoming a resource pool for the Global North and transnational corporations. Together with Million and Tim we chanted "Agroecology is the solution, not a failing green revolution!" and "Self-determination, not global domination!"

Hosting Kenyan Partners in Seattle

Samuel and Peris Nderitu, the founders of G-BLACK: Grow Biointensive Agriculture Centre of Kenya, and their two children Keith and Anet joined us for several days in October. We organized learning exchanges with Black-led urban gardens and farms, including Wakulima Farm in Des Moines (founded by two Kenyans), Yes Farm at Yesler Terrace with the Black Farmers Collective, Nurturing Roots Farm at the Black Power EPICenter in Beacon Hill, and Got Green's Food Access Team at their community garden. On Oct 17, 30 people joined our community potluck where we learned from the Nderitu family about their agroecological training programs and young women's empowerment work.

Their biointensive method focuses on growing as much diverse food as possible within a small amount of land, to feed communities and generate income. We are grateful to have met with G-BLACK again in person, following Simone's visit in 2018, as we continue our collaboration!

Responding to Attacks on Agroecology

Since our experience at the UN Convention on Biological Diversity in 2016, AGRA Watch has been engaged with research and analysis on the Cornell Alliance for Science (CAS). We aim to expose how CAS is used as a so-called "independent" university platform for the Gates Foundation to shape the debate on GMOs on the continent, particularly through its public relations and media training program designed to influence public opinion towards pro-biotech agricultural policies. As one disturbing example, in 2019 a CAS Fellow authored an article denouncing agroecology. In response to the uproar on the AFSA listserv, we provided a briefing report on this particular fellow as a window into CAS' program. This work compliments our background research into CAS and the database we created to document the CAS Fellows (2015-19), the institutions with which they are associated, and the funding relationship to the Gates Foundation.

"CAGJ offers a rare and crucial connection between U.S. food sovereignty advocates and their allies overseas. For those working to reform destructive agricultural policies in Africa, CAGJ provides a platform, right in the shadow of the Gates Foundation, to call out the Alliance for a Green Revolution in Africa and other pro-corporate aid initiatives. In the battle for the future of food, CAGJ is on the front lines."

Timothy A. Wise, author, Eating Tomorrow: Agribusiness, Family Farmers, and the Battle for the Future of Food

Looking Forward: Publishing Research & Organizing!

- At the start of 2020, we hired a renowned researcher in our movement, Christina Schiavoni, to complete our report on CAS! We will publish this report to expose the manipulations of CAS and reinforce our argument that agroecology is the real solution to hunger and poverty.
- We hope to travel to Africa again this Fall to attend the next Alliance for Food Sovereignty in Africa General Assembly as an allied member, and continue consulting with our African partners on our campaign collaboration.
- We will also focus on re-energizing our AGRA Watch core committee! We continue to be deeply inspired by the creativity and leadership of our African partners, and are committed to carrying this work forward. We invite you to organize with us as we chart out new directions to challenge both AGRA and the Gates Foundation on their home turf; we cannot let their neocolonial efforts to corporatize African agriculture go unchallenged. Join us as we work to promote real solutions to hunger and poverty coming from small-scale farmers and food producers.

Movement Building

FOOD SOVEREIGNTY IS A CLIMATE SOLUTION

Drawing essential connections between issues and movements has always been one of CAGJ's strengths. In 2019 we raised awareness of the importance of food sovereignty and agroecology as solutions to our climate crisis, and we will continue this vital work moving forward!

Agroecology for Climate Action

We painted a giant banner painted with the message of Alliance for Food Sovereignty in Africa's 2019 campaign, "Agroecology for Climate Action" to unveil at the July SLEE Dinner. We carried the banner in the Sept 20th Global Youth Climate Strike March, and it accompanied us at all of our October events with our African partners, including our action at The Gates Foundation headquarters.

13th SLEE Dinner

The centrality of food sovereignty to climate justice was the theme of our 13th SLEE Dinner. The keynote was given by Doria Robinson, the founder and executive director of Urban Tilth, a Richmond CA-based organization who was awarded the 2019 Food Sovereignty Prize. In her moving keynote, "For the Love of Soil: Dismantling the Extractive Economy with Justice and Food Sovereignty" (watch on CAGJ website), Doria spoke about how food sovereignty and agroecology can lead us to a Just Transition to address the climate crisis. "The food sovereignty movement is a model and a metaphor for everything we try to do. Let's make this roadmap, and let's remember that culture is at the core, and relationship is the vehicle."

Seattle for a Green New Deal

CAGJ supported the Seattle for a Green New Deal campaign by mobilizing members to contact City Council; the campaign received a full endorsement! Led by Got Green, 350.Org, and Mazaska Talks, the campaign aims to eliminate climate pollution by 2030, address historical injustices, and create thousands of good jobs. Organizers gave a workshop at our WTO+20 Town Hall event, where dozens of Green New Deal banners were painted by participants, with silkscreens donated by David Solnit, 350.org Arts Organizer.

Alliance Building

CAGJ fosters alliances on international, national and local scales. We are proud to be members of Alliance for Food Sovereignty in Africa (AFSA), US Food Sovereignty Alliance and National Family Farm Coalition (NFFC). We participated in NFFC Board meetings in Feb. 2019 and 2020, most recently in Birmingham, which included a very moving day of learning civil rights history, hosted by Federation of Southern Cooperatives. We hope to join AFSA's annual assembly this Fall. We were honored to be recognized by Provender Alliance as a recipient of The Eyes on the World Award, for "tirelessly fighting for global and local food justice". Locally, we endorsed La Resistencia's call to shut-down the NW Detention Center, and joined efforts to secure a Green New Deal for Seattle.

US Food Sovereignty Alliance (USFSA)

CAGJ has continued to play leadership roles in the USFSA, as co-convenor of the Youth Process, a member of the Secretariat and International Relations Collective, and an active participant in the Western Region. CAGJ staff helped produce the 11th annual Food Sovereignty Prize, and supported operations for the USFSA's new collective structure. In March 2020, Simone participated in the first National Political Education Course with USFSA members from across the country and Puerto Rico, plus La Via Campesina allies from Mexico and Canada. Topics included Black womxn leadership and resisting patriarchy in our food system, the history of agrarian and farmworker movements in the US (including how we got here from genocide and enslavement), and Just Transition and Relationality led by two Indigenous leaders who reminded us of the genocidal impacts of farming and agriculture on Native Americans, and the importance of our movement including an Indigenous food sovereignty frame.

CAGJ LEADERSHIP DEVELOPMENT

AMP: Activists Mobilizing for Power Conference

In August, four CAGJ leaders traveled to Spokane for the Western States Center's Activists Mobilizing for Power (AMP) Conference, including FJP co-chairs Robyn Greenfield and Noel Hutton, Dream Team member Neo Mazur, and Simone Adler. Longtime CAGJ member and AGRA Watch co-chair Bill Aal, now based in Spokane, taught a workshop on popular education facilitation. A couple sessions that gave useful insight for CAGJ included: Transformative Organizing to Build a Movement for Now and Beyond and Using the Media to Activate the Grassroots and Drive Change. We shared back reflections on CAGJ's role in anti-racist movement-building.

Dream Team

Fifteen dedicated, brilliant CAGJ members stepped up to guide our 2019-20 Strategic Assessment and Planning Process. Known as the Dream Team, these folks have been meeting monthly (sometimes more!) since June 2019, planning and attending our membership gatherings, developing our membership survey, and offering their feedback and direction on our vision, strategies and theory of change. Guided by consultant Scott Winn, we are focused on deepening membership engagement with a focus on racial justice and anti-oppression. We are so grateful for the Dream Team's leadership!

Membership Committee

In 2019 CAGJ was fortunate that two incredible UW Social Work students chose to do their practicums with us, and they have done wonders for our Membership organizing! Stephanie Markham developed a comprehensive Membership Database Clean-up Project that transformed our efforts to effectively engage members and volunteers, a crucial part of grassroots organizing. In addition to having a robust set of protocols, we now have smoother processes and less clunky systems. Our subsequent Membership Organizer Practicum Intern, Zoe Freeman, is carrying on the torch, and we are thrilled to be building stronger Membership on-boarding processes.

Looking forward: Rise Up! Summer School is back!

Back by popular demand, we are organizing a second iteration of Rise Up! Summer School, a 3-month political education and leadership development program to build anti-oppression analysis and learn about food sovereignty. This program is for folks 18 and older. You're invited to join our Organizing Collective to plan and lead the program; roles include recruitment, curriculum curation, logistics, facilitation, and communications. In response to the coronavirus pandemic, the Organizing Collective is planning for the program to be online, and interactive! Join our Organizing Collective, or sign up to participate:

tinyurl.com/SummerSchool20

Join us for Rise Up! Summer School 2020:

- Summer School will take place (by Zoom or in-person) in June, July, and August
- Summer School Discussion dates, Tuesdays 6:30-8:30pm: June 16, July 21, and August 18.
- Field trips will take place during a week-end day each month, depending on status of COVID-19.

"Ever since my first introduction at SLEE in 2018, CAGJ has proven to be a caretaker, holding a unique space for collective joy, learning, celebration, and unified energy embracing all aspects of the food system. This work is always guided by a broader, critical lens rooted in the knowledge of local communities. Food is the medium through which we illustrate interdependence among all movements for justice, and I am so grateful that CAGJ has opened up numerous opportunities for me to grow and contribute for many years to come."

- Noel Hutton, Food Justice Project Co-Chair

FUNDRAISING REPORT:

Facing the Crisis with a Strong Foundation

Before the coronavirus pandemic hit, CAGJ was in a very solid financial position. Two of our longtime funders, Stansbury Family Foundation and Swift Foundation, not only re-committed to multi-year grants, they each increased their gifts for the coming two years. At the same time, we received increased funding from a major donor, allowing us to hire a researcher to complete our AGRA Watch report on Cornell Alliance for Science. We are so grateful to Quinault Indian Tribe for their support of our GE Salmon campaign in 2019, in addition to Seymour and Sylvia Rothchild Family Foundation and UFCW 21 for their generous support.

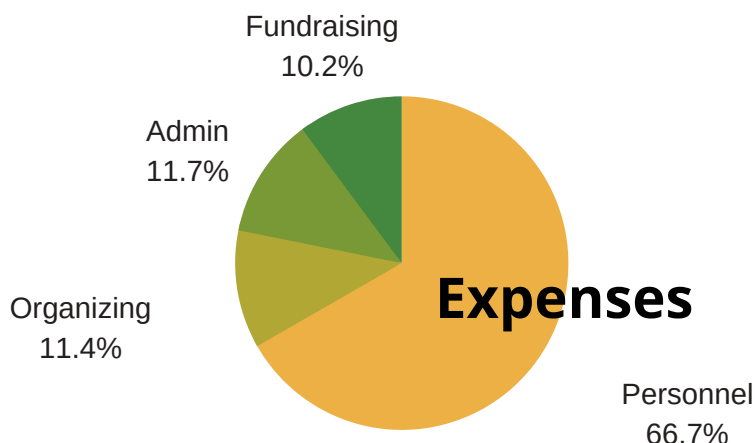

Our funding in 2020 is uncertain, due to the financial crisis. We rely on donations from so many businesses and small-scale food producers to make our SLEE Dinner a successful fundraiser, and many are suffering at this time. We also know that many of our members have been laid off, and are facing uncertainties, thus making it difficult to continue funding our organizing. We are hopeful that we will be able to host the 2020 SLEE Dinner on October 17, and we extend our gratitude to the sponsors of our 2019 Dinner: UFCW 21, UAW 4121, Central Co-op, Farmer Direct Organic, New Roots Organics, Acequia Institute, Friends of the Earth, PCC Community Markets, and Central Market Shoreline. A huge thank you to our annual In-kind Sponsors: Real Change, Loki Fish Co., Madres Kitchen and Equal Exchange!

In early 2020 we reached our goal of raising our Organizing Director's salary; while Simone stepped down, we hope to offer this position to a new staff-member as soon as possible, once we better understand the outcomes of this crisis. In the meantime, we are committed to increasing our Executive Director salary, and hope for the best moving forward, for our communities locally and globally.

"CAGJ brings big international problems into focus at the local level where we can tackle them in meaningful ways. Some of these struggles can seem overwhelming, but CAGJ gives us local handles."
